EXHIBIT 6-22

Anshan Iron and Steel Group Corporation is a large-sized steel production base which restored and grew up earliest after the founding of New China, one of the few State-owned enterprises which have made greatest contribution to the Country and a iron and steel backbone to support the Republic's economy, shouldering the momentous historical tasks entrusted by the State and having the reputation of the "Cradle of the Chinese Steel Industry" and the "Eldest Son of the Republic's Steel Industry".

Rising at the ruin and experiencing 60 years of construction and development, Ansteel has become a modern steel enterprises group with the most competitive power in the world. Ansteel now has three major production bases – Anshan Base, Bayuquan Base and Chaoyang Base, with an integrated and potential capacity of more than 25 million tons, and has made important breakthroughs in diversified business and international operation.

Ansteel Culture emerged and formed in the developing course. Its core includes the core values of "Building a Powerful Country with Iron and Steel, Benefiting the Society and Achieving Sustainable Development" and the Angang Spirit of "Innovation, Practicality, Striving and Devotion", which have become a strong intrinsic motivation to make Ansteel developing to a higher stage and level and encourage generation after generation of Angang People.

In the new historical period, Ansteel will continue to uphold the scientific outlook on development and step toward the "fully taking-off" goal by 2015, Ansteel will rank among the world top 10 steel makers with an annual raw steel production, and become a super large-sized transnational group corporation with powerful main business of iron and steel, diversified industry structure and strong international competitiveness, leading the development trend of the world steel industry.

Meanwhile we as a central enterprise will fulfill our responsibility and obligation to the society, and work hard to create values to the customer, the employees and the society and make our contribution to building a harmonious society.

China's Shandong Steel closes in on Rizhao

By Jamil Anderlini in Beijing

A hostile takeover of one of China's largest non-state steel groups by a state-owned competitor could be finalised as early as next week in a deal that has heightened concerns about creeping renationalisation.

State-owned Shandong Iron and Steel Group, the world's ninth-largest steelmaker by capacity, is likely to take a two-thirds stake in privately held Rizhao Iron and Steel, according to two people familiar with the matter and Chinese media reports.

Du Shuanghua, Rizhao's majority owner and China's second-richest man last year according to the Hurun Report rich list, has fought a bitter battle to avoid losing his company to Shandong Steel, a newly formed group controlled by the provincial government of Shandong, in the country's east.

Mr Du attempted to block the takeover by handing up to 30 per cent of Rizhao's shares at a low valuation to Kai Yuan Holdings, a Hong Kong-listed company which is controlled by close relatives of Hu Jintao, Chinese president, according to people familiar with the transaction and Hong Kong media reports.

Kai Yuan Holdings did not respond to requests for confirmation or comment.

The plan to block Shandong Steel's advances eventually failed because the involvement of the president's relatives was too obvious and any perception of favouritism would have been politically dangerous for Mr Hu, the people said.

In the first half of this year, when many state-owned steel mills reported losses, Rizhao's profits hit Rmb1.8bn ($263m) while Shandong Steel, three times the size of Rizhao in terms of production capacity, reported a loss of Rmb1.3bn for the same period.

According to Chinese media reports, Shandong Steel will inject Rmb16bn of new capital into Rizhao in exchange for the two-thirds stake, leaving Mr Du to share the remainder of the company with his new Hong Kong-listed partner.

The Hurun Report conservatively estimated Rizhao to be worth about Rmb30bn at the end of last year but Shandong's investment values the company at about Rmb8bn, according to Rupert Hoogewerf, Hurun Report chief executive. He said: "This strikes me as a rather low valuation, especially compared with overseas competitors."

The deal is being closely watched in the Chinese business world, where many private entrepreneurs complain the state is expanding aggressively in industries that were partially privatised over the past decade, such as airlines, metals, petrochemicals and consumer goods.

The late 2008 arrest of Huang Guangyu, founder of Gome electronics retailer and China's then richest man, was seen as a political decision by senior leaders who feared Mr Huang's business empire had become systemically important to the Chinese economy, according to people familiar with the matter.

Analysts say the central government does not have a policy of actively encouraging renationalisation but that Beijing's response to the economic crisis has accelerated a process known in Chinese as "guojinmintui" or "the state advances as the private sector recedes".

The flood of bank lending and stimulus spending unleashed since the start of the year to battle the crisis has mostly been channelled into the state sector, allowing government-owned enterprises like Shandong Steel to survive with the help of generous credit lines while more efficient private competitors struggled.

Shandong Steel was formed just last year when the provincial government merged two state-owned steel producers. That consolidation and the Rizhao takeover are part of a central government plan to consolidate the world's largest steel industry and create state-owned giants that can compete globally.

Some Chinese media reports have suggested Rizhao did not receive all the required government approvals when it was established in

PUBLIC

2003, allowing the Shandong government to aggressively pursue the takeover with support from Beijing.

Rizhao Steel said the Shandong Steel acquisition was still under discussion. Shandong Steel could not be reached for comment and the Shandong provincial government, which controls the company, refused to comment.

Executives of Hebei Iron and Steel, China's largest steel producer, declined to comment on state media's allegations that the resignation of the state-owned firm's chairman, Wang Yifang, might be linked to corruption.

On Tuesday, Wang submitted his resignation as chairman due to "work changes", the Shenzhen-listed firm announced. He has been replaced as chairman by Yu Yong, the 50-year-old former managing director of Hebei Iron and Steel.

Wang, 55, who was appointed chairman in 2010, resigned before the normal retirement age of Chinese state-owned enterprise executives.

> I have heard the rumours, but there is no evidence of wrongdoing
> LI BOHAI, COMPANY LAWYE

Also on Tuesday, Hebei Iron and Steel received the resignation letter of its deputy managing director Peng Zhaofeng, whose departure was also related to "work changes", the company said. Peng had been nominated as a candidate for director, the firm said.

An article on the website of Communist Party mouthpiece People's Daily dated yesterday said Wang was accused of links to "stolen mine assets".

A Hebei Iron and Steel investor relations spokesman said he had seen the allegations but "did not understand the matter". He reiterated that Wang resigned due to "work changes".

Li Bohai, a lawyer for Hebei Iron and Steel Group, the state-owned parent of Hebei Iron and Steel, said: "I have heard the rumours, but there is no evidence of wrongdoing."

At a company meeting on Monday, Zhang Jiehui, deputy governor of Hebei province, said the change in leadership was "an important matter for the company's long-term development".

Zhang praised the work of Wang, Peng and Yu, who all made speeches at the meeting, according to the company's website.

The change of company leadership was a decision of the Hebei government after thorough and careful consideration, Zhang said.

At Monday's meeting, Zhou Jie, head of Hebei's State-owned Assets Supervision and Administration Commission, said the leadership changes were important for strengthening the firm's management and corporate governance.

In the first three quarters, Hebei Iron and Steel's net profit plunged 68.2 per cent to 116.92 million yuan (HK$148.23 million), due to oversupply and low steel prices, according to the company.

The share price of Hebei Iron and Steel fell from 2.15 yuan on Friday to 2.07 yuan yesterday.

Introduction

Introduction to WISCO

In 1955, the construction of WISCO-the first super-large state-owned iron and steel complex established after the foundation of P. R. China, was started; on September 13, 1958, it was completed and put into production. So far, it has become a backbone state-owned enterprise under the State Council and the State-owned Assets Supervision and Administration Commission (SASAC). Located on the southern bank of the Yangtze River in the eastern suburb of Wuhan, Hubei Province, its home plant area covers total land area of 21.17km2. Over the years, WISCO has developed a full set of advanced iron and steel production processes and equipments for mining, coking, steel-making, iron-making, rolling and supporting auxiliary facilities, making it an important production base of high-quality sheets and plates in China, and contributing a lot to the national economy and modernization of China. After merging and reorganizing Ezhou Iron & Steel Co., Ltd., Liuzhou Iron & Steel Co., Ltd., and Kunming Iron & Steel Co., Ltd., WISCO has grown into a giant enterprise group with annual output exceeding 40 million tons, and ranked 4th among its counterparts around the world. In 2010, WISCO realized total operating income of 190.7 billion Yuan and total assets of 203.8 billion Yuan, ranking 340th among the Fortune 500 companies.

Nowadays, WISCO mainly engages in three industries including iron and steel, hi-tech industries, and international trade. Its iron and steel products comprise hundreds of varieties such as hot-rolled coil, hot-rolled section steel, hot-rolled heavy rail, plate of moderate thickness, cold-rolled coil, galvanized plate, cold-rolled oriented and non-oriented silicon steel sheet, color coated plate, and high-speed wire rod, etc. To date, WISCO has generally built up three strategic product bases; become the largest first-rate production base of silicon steel in the world; independently developed the auto sheets for medium-grade and high-grade automobiles, and; taken leading position in the production of high-performance structural steel and high-quality long products. Among them, the cold-rolled silicon steel sheet and ship plate win the honor of “Famous Brand of China”; the high-quality auto sheet, and steel products for bridge, pipeline, pressure vessel, container, cord thread, fire-resistance and weathering steel, and series steel products for electric engineering have won great fame both on domestic and overseas market, and; “Wugang Brand” has been recognized as a well-known brand in China. According to the report issued by the World Brand Lab, the “Wugang Brand”, with total brand value of 17.052 billion Yuan, ranks 56th among famous brands in the world.

WISCO has tapped diverse related industries including coking, refractory materials, chemical engineering, sinter powder metal product, granulating slag, oxygen, rare gas, coal tar, crude benzene, ammonium sulfate. Moreover, it has engaged in other domestic and overseas businesses such as project design and construction, mechanical manufacture and processing, transportation, logistics and warehousing, automation technology, development of overseas resources, investment, and financing, etc.
