Monthly Removals Report to Parliament

Month: June 2026

The Canada Border Services Agency has a statutory obligation to remove all individuals subject to an enforceable removal order as soon as possible. The existence of a removal order does not automatically mean that the Canada Border Services Agency is in a position to immediately remove someone from the country.

Persons ordered removed are entitled to due process before the law and cannot be removed until pending legal avenues that stay a removal have been resolved. In addition, impediments may exist that must be resolved which may delay removals from Canada.

In accordance with section 49(3) of the Immigration and Refugee Protection Act, the Minister must prepare a report in respect of each month of the year that sets out the number of removal orders that were enforced in that month, the number of removal orders that were not enforced in accordance with subsection (3) and the reasons for the delays. (4) The report must also include countries of origin, age and gender breakdowns and criminal backgrounds of persons removed.

The Canada Border Services Agency maintains the Removal inventories to track and manage all individuals with removal orders.

The Removals in progress inventory includes individuals who can be processed for removal. At this stage, Canada Border Services Agency works with the individual and foreign countries to overcome challenges to removal, including but not limited to, the issuance of travel documents.

The Removal not Possible inventory includes individuals that cannot currently be removed. These include, but are not limited to, pending Federal Court appeals, criminal charges, or Pre-Removal Risk Assessments, and sentences of imprisonment.

The Wanted inventory includes individuals who failed to appear for removal proceedings and the Canada Border Services Agency is working to locate the foreign national.

The Canada Border Services Agency uses electronic databases. Case information is updated daily or at the earliest opportunity.

Due to some delays in entering confirmations of departure, this monthly report may not reflect all removals enforced within the reporting month. Numbers provided in the report are as of July 1, 2026.

(a) Removals Enforced and Reasons for Delays

The status of an individual may change over time, and an individual may appear in different inventories, at different times.

Individuals who have left Canada without confirming their departure with a Canada Border Services Agency official remain in the removal inventory until sufficient evidence demonstrates that they are no longer in Canada and the removal order can be enforced administratively.

The tables below display removals enforced to date, as well as the breakdown of individuals located in the Removal in Progress, Removal Not Possible and Wanted inventories, and the reason for delay.

(c) Removals with Criminality

Section 36 of the Immigration and Refugee Protection Act outlines when someone may be considered criminally inadmissible to Canada. This includes situations where a person has been convicted of a crime either in Canada or abroad, which can lead to inadmissibility or cancellation of a temporary resident visa. Those subsection are 36(1)(a), 36(1)(b), 36(2)(a) and 36(2)(b).

The Immigration and Refugee Protection Act specifies that foreign nationals may be inadmissible for any of the following reasons:

- security;
- crimes against humanity and war crimes;
- criminality;
- organized crime;
- risk to health of Canadians or excessive demand on health services;
- misrepresentation;
- inability to financially support oneself or their dependents;
- and non-compliance with the law (e.g., overstaying the time an individual is permitted to remain in Canada).

The full descriptions of the inadmissibilities can be found in section 33 to 42, Grounds for inadmissibility, of the Immigration and Refugee Protection Act.

The table below displays the total enforced removals, disaggregated by inadmissibility for removal.
